China Mobile Technology Commences Phase 1 of Capacity Expansion at Newly Acquired Land

China Mobile Technology Limited, a leading mobile handset manufacturer in the PRC, today announced that it has commenced phase 1 of capacity expansion at its newly acquired land in Long Gang industrial park (龙岗宝龙工业城), approximately 40 minutes from Shenzhen city.

Since the Group's first fund raising exercise on 14th February 2007, the Group has grown steadily with increased sales and improved handset design solutions. With the acquisition of the Long Gang industrial land in 2005, which spans 86,000 sq m, the Group intends to consolidate its design and manufacturing units together to enhance its time-to-market response and provide greater efficiency among its core business units.

"We have been looking for a suitable piece of land for quite some time to group our design and manufacturing units together, this is part of our strategy to create a seamless supply chain among our Group and reinforced our leading position as an integrated handset design manufacturer in the PRC." said Ms. Helen Yang, Chief Executive Officer of China Mobile Technology.

In January 2008, the number of new mobile subscribers hit a record high of 8.48 million, taking Chinese total mobile users to exceed 555 million. The Ministry of Information Industry forecasted last month that China's phone subscribers total, mobile and fixed line combined, are expected to hit 976 million in 2008, with mobile phone subscribers accounting for 46.4 percent of the population.

Ms. Yang further explained "Since the group was incorporated, our production capacity have been running at full capacity at our current production premises and with the proceeds raised from Pre-IPO investors, we are able to accelerate our expansion plans to garner more market share in the PRC and generate greater cost efficiencies."

The contemplated plan is to implement the capacity expansion in 2 Phases. Phase 1 will be for the development of basic infrastructure and the construction of 2 worker hostels and 2 block of multi purpose building targeted to be completed in July 2008. Phase 2 will be for the expansion of warehousing and production facilities which is targeted to commence in September 2008 and be completed by end of 2008.
